Do You Have A Job? ...

At the close of WWI many states provided a bonus for the veterans coming home. At the close of WWII, the veterans were given a tremendous amount of help by a grateful government. At the supposed end of the Korean conflict (which isn't over yet) the veterans were given the same breaks as of WWII.

Now come our Vietnam veterans. There have been no welcoming parades; no bands have played. In fact if it weren't for some organizations such as the American Legion, the Red Cross or the VFW, the ex-soldiers wouldn't even be noticed. These young men need jobs. They want to get ahead just as our veterans did in the past, but they need some help. If you employ workers, be sure that you give them a big break. Call the employment office and give them the information and they in turn will find a veteran for the spot. It's high time we all give these new veterans a chance.—Winter Haven (Fla.) Forbidden Talk

Albert Shanker, the militant New York union leader who heads the United Federation of Teachers, has proposed that parents be allowed to "shop around" for the public school they feel is best suited for the education of their children.

That sort of talk may be acceptable from a Northerner, but a Southerner making such a suggestion would find himself beset by a swarm of federal bureaucrats and court officials. Or maybe the term "shopping around" is less disturbing to the feds than "freedom of choice."—Columbia (S.C.) State

Earth Day to Emphasize Action Need

WASHINGTON (AP) — Next week is the first anniversary of Earth Day. But unlike last year, when cries of alarm were raised over environmental decay, the emphasis will be on individual actions to insure a more livable planet.

"Last year we learned the environment has problems," said Sarah Fonyo, executive secretary of the St. Louis Coalition for the Environment. "This year we want the people to find out what things they can do."

Instead of last year's 24-hour blitz, President Nixon joined by 40 governors, has proclaimed earth week, April 19-25. April 22 will be Earth Day.

The St. Louis Coalition is sponsoring a drive in which Boy Scouts and other groups will collect bottles and return them to stores.

Besides emphasizing benefits of recycling, the money earned will go for local environmental projects.

Nebraska starts a cleanup campaign Saturday. There will be tree-planting, too, and a program emphasizing recycling of glass and paper.

Authorities expect to collect 100 tons of paper and glass from across the state.

In New York City, 15 blocks of busy Madison Avenue from 42nd to 57th Street will be closed to traffic from noon to 2 p.m. each day. Air-pollution experts will measure the level of exhaust pollutants on the carless avenue.

On Earth Day the American Museum of Natural History in New York will have an environmental "hot line" for the public to telephone and ask environmental questions of the museum's scientific staff.

The Ohio Public Interest Action Group plans a statewide campaign to raise $1 million for a fulltime force of lawyers and scientists to represent the public interest in questions of urban and rural environmental quality and corporate responsibility.

Many communities, small and large, across the nation will have cleanup campaigns, tree plantings and seminars.

CONCORDE TAKES SHAPE despite the SST grounding in the United States and increasingly pessimistic forecasts in France and Britain as to the supersonic plane's commercial prospects. Both Parties Going for Young Voters

WASHINGTON (AP) — Both the Republican and Democratic parties are already at work on devising a strategy to win support of the 11 million 18-to-20-year-olds eligible to vote in next year's presidential election.

At this early stage party leaders' thinking reflects the political arithmetic of public opinion polls that indicate most college students favor neither party, but among those who do the Democrats are preferred by almost 2 to 1.

Thus, Democratic National Chairman Lawrence F. O'Brien talks in terms of registration drives, while his Republican counterpart, Sen. Robert J. Dole, emphasizes the need to sell young people on the GOP.

"It's almost a nuts-and-bolts thing," said O'Brien in an interview. "We're going to do everything we can to register young people in goodly numbers and our hope is that they'll side with us."

"You've got to go after them," Dole told an interviewer. "We recognize that it can be a gold mine or a dry hole, in the oil industry vernacular. We won't get them all, nor will the Democrats, but we can't afford to lose our share."

They could have, assuming that either party can get them to the polls. Experience in the four states that already permit 18-year-olds to vote is not encouraging. Census Bureau figures show, for example, that 55 per cent of the voters in the four states—Georgia, Kentucky, Alaska and Hawaii—went to the polls in the 1970 off-year election, but only 26 per cent of those between 18 and 20 voted.

The two major parties also face another problem. The 1970 Gallup Poll on party preferences among the young covered only college students. But the majority of the 11 million young voters are not in college. Four million of them are working, 1.5 million are housewives, and 800,000 are in the armed forces.

"How do you contact the non-student?" asked Dole.

"Through business or unions?" To find the answer, each party has appointed a youth coordinator to devise ways of appealing to both the student and the nonstudent.

Miss Nancy Payne, a 23-year-old graduate of Connecticut College for Women, has charge of organizing youth activities for the Republican National Committee.

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — Gov. Jimmy Carter has continued a popular program begun by former Gov. Lester Maddox and invited Georgians into his office to discuss their problems.

More than 60 persons—young, old, in suits and in coveralls—came into his office, a group at a time, during his first session Wednesday.

Unlike Maddox, who laughed, joked and sympathized with the people in loud tones, Carter led them to a corner of his office away from newsmen and spoke with them in hushed tones.

Louisville Wants the Convention

WASHINGTON (AP) — A surprise applicant, Louisville, Ky., has emerged as a leading contender to host the 1972 Democratic National Convention.

"We are taking a very serious look at Louisville," party Treasurer Robert S. Strauss said in an interview.

The decision, he added, may depend on the kind of hotel and motel accommodations party officials see when they visit the Kentucky city next month. A minimum of 16,000 to 20,000 rooms are needed.

Other cities seeking the convention are Miami Beach, Chicago, Houston and San Francisco. Several top party officials lean toward Miami Beach.

Party officials said the Louisville delegation made the strongest presentation last month at closed sessions of the site committee.

Louisville offered a hall seating 18,000 people; parking space for 27,000 cars; 32,000 hotel and motel rooms; and the $1 million in cash the Democrats are asking.

And the Louisville delegation promised for Democrats "all the free bourbon they can drink and all the free chicken they can eat."

If the hotel and motel accommodations are satisfactory, Louisville would have several advantages over Miami Beach, which hosted the 1968 Republican National Convention and wants both parties' meetings in 1972.

War Veterans Turning Up for Reunion

By DONALD SANDERS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) —

There's going to be a lot of talk around the Mayflower Hotel the next couple of days about De-Havillands, Spads, Nieupoorts and Sopwith Camels. And about the occupation of Paris—friendly U.S. version, circa 1918.

Nearly 175 World War I overseas fliers and 80 of their wives have turned up for a reunion to rap about their war to make the world safe for democracy and talk about setting up a permanent organization of a rapidly diminishing breed.

These are the men—all of them pushing 75 or more—who volunteered to man the flimsy flying machines of World War I, enlisting in what was called the flying service of the Army Signal Corps.

"Be an American Eagle!" says an old recruiting poster someone has uncovered. It suggests young men contact their local draft boards, any recruiting officer or the chief signal officer of the U.S. Army.

Chief promoter of the reunion is Ira Milton Jones, a Milwaukee patent attorney. He pushed ahead despite some discouraging words from former Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker.

Rickenbacker, Jones says, contended "the Air Force got sick of us" when it sponsored a previous reunion in July 1968. He declined to sign a letter trying to stir up interest but promised to attend. Rickenbacker sent regrets later citing personal reasons.

By writing letters and talking to people, Jones compiled a list of more than 800 World War I fliers still living. Some of them served with the British or the French Lafayette Escadrille before transferring to U.S. forces.

The 173 who sent word they would come represent 28 states, the Virgin Islands and the District of Columbia.

A number of them, like retired Maj. Gen. Leigh Wade of Oakland, Calif., served in the Air Force in World War II.

One who did not was John A. Logan of Washington, former head of the National Association of Food Chains, who was retired for disability after World War I. "I had my neck broken," he says laconically. "We hit the ground a little hard after a dogfight."

Recalling that he and his fellow observers outranked the pilots, Logan says the pilots still resent it. An observer, he says, did what an entire crew does now: communications, navigation, observation, bombing.

The invocation at Saturday night's banquet will be given by a former World War I flier, the Rev. Frank Lambert, a World War II chaplain and now a retired minister in Sea Cliff, Long Island, N.Y. Another former observer, Spessard Holland, retired Democratic senator from Florida, will introduce the main speaker, Adm. Thomas H. Moorer, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Says Nobody Learns in Schools Now

By LYNN SHERR
Associated Press Writer
SAN FRANCISCO (AP) —

The only thing wrong with the nation's public schools is that nobody learns anything there, says James Herndon, 44, a rangy school teacher and author whose recent criticisms of U.S. education have won him a niche in the pantheon of radical school reformers.

"America's schools were invented as a place for people to learn certain things related to work—like getting to work on time," he said in a recent interview. "A big thing in school is not being tardy to class. But it really doesn't matter because there ain't nothin' goin' on in class."

"And there's no use training kids for work now, 'cause there ain't no jobs," he said.

A 13-year veteran of the California school system, where, he said, he found more concern with triplicate absence forms than with kids' minds, Herndon blamed restrictive official lesson plans for much of the lack of learning.

"There are no kids who can't read, but like there are no kids who can't add," he said. "But with all the procedures and tests and scoring sheets, the kid says learning to read must be hard. So in school, he can't read."

Once, Herndon taught his eighth-graders how to read by ignoring the standard textbook methods and simply providing good books. But, he complained, his "innovative" classroom wound up "as a safety valve" for the rest of the school, rather than as a catalyst for change.

"They began to farm kids out to us—everyone who couldn't make it," he recalled. "What they were saying was, 'Good, now we don't have to change.'"

As a result, Herndon decided that everyone should quit worrying about short-run reforms such as smaller classes.

"We should get rid of compulsory education laws," he said. "That will change things! If a kid who's just been chewed out can just get up in the middle of class and leave, then schools, will have to get better. They'll have to offer some way to make the kids stay if they want their federal money," he explained.

But with the new balance of power in favor of students, Herndon admitted, kids might grow too powerful, too eager to exercise their authority.

"Maybe they'd be the enemy," he speculated. "They'd be firing people all over. But then we'll have to deal with that. That's how you learn to stay alive."

He said the policy had alienated a few sheriffs, but had brought respect to the trooper's job.

Scott also has taken steps, including public criticism, to see that officers get their day in court when they issue a ticket.

"Arbitrary dismissal of cases by a municipal judge, sometimes at the request of a sheriff, is improper and should not be condoned," he said.

"This has alienated a few municipal judges, but it has greatly reduced this abuse in several courts."

The number of fatalities edged slightly upward again in 1970 to 615, still below the 1968 total, and the number thus far this year is about 150, which is the same as the number killed at this time last year.

SCOTT, Ark. (AP) — Under Col. Ralph D. Scott, the State Police won national attention for success in traffic enforcement and curtailment of death on the highways of Arkansas in 1969.

Scott, the retiring director, compliments the men of the department and "an undeviating policy of strict and impartial traffic law enforcement."

The attention was focused on the department's performance in 1969 when traffic deaths on the roads of Arkansas totaled 605, a drop of 102 from the total of the year before.

"At the beginning of the year, we accepted as a valid premise the old adage that if arrests go up, accidents go down," Scott said. "We firmly believe that the greatest deterrent to violations is prompt arrest and prompt adjudication in the courts."

The department stopped issuing warning tickets for moving traffic violations of a hazardous nature. The result was that in 1969 arrests leaped to 86,554, compared to 50,498 in 1968.

"The most significant aspect of our traffic law enforcement was elimination of ticket fixing at all levels," Scott said. "This was strictly adhered to."

"While it is recognized that there is nothing novel and unusual about this policy, it is, unfortunately, a fact that in some departments fixing is still done," he said.

"Aside from the fact that any interference with due process is basically wrong, nothing is more degrading and discouraging to a police officer than to have some superior in his own organization or some minor functionary in the criminal justice system presume to dispense justice in a highly arbitrary way by acting as judge and jury," Scott said.

Housing Funds for Magnolia

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. David Pryor, D-Ark., said Thursday the Housing and Urban Development Department had awarded a $47,990 contract to the Housing Authority at Magnolia for Phase Two of the low-rent housing modernization program.

The work will include completion of improvements to buildings and grounds and construction of a community center.

Admirals to Break With Tradition

By ROBERT A. DOBKIN
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of the Navy John H. Chafee says future admirals should be willing to break with tradition and rock the ship.

These officers should be encouraged, not just tolerated, Chafee said Thursday in an unusual four-page letter offering his guidance to Adm. Bernard A. Clarey, president of this year's Flag Selection Board which picks captains for promotion to rear admiral.

"I would hope that you would select a few iconoclasts—original, provocative thinkers who would stimulate the Navy to constantly re-examine its premises and whose selection would encourage those in the lower ranks to do likewise, with the realization that they are not just tolerated but in fact welcomed," he said.

Chafee's letter, while unusual, was not without precedent. Several years ago one of his predecessors wrote to the selection board suggesting the Navy end its rigid ways and bring younger men to the top.

Five years ago, at age 44, Elmo R. Zumwalt Jr. became the youngest admiral in the Navy. And last year, at 49, he became the youngest chief of naval operations.

Zumwalt has brought many changes to make life more attractive in the Navy, long regarded as the most conservative of the services.

To underscore his feeling that tradition should be cast aside in promotions, Chafee told Clarey: "There must not be a single set route to flag rank."

A seagoing command should not be the only criterion, he said.

Thinkers are needed, men with "drive and imagination to conceive, develop and produce sophisticated hardware ... who have the experience which comes from heading our laboratories or working within the material command, who know how ... to analyze our requirements and the capabilities of present adversaries."

Others saw the announcement as a major step toward peace. As Yuen put it, "There's more to the world than politics. I think the free flow of culture and friendship in both directions is very important in building a permanent peace on earth."

With these words, 62-year-old Sam Yuen voiced a wish he has had since 1937, when he left Canton, China, to come to the United States.

Hopes that his wish could come true were raised this week when President Nixon eased trade and travel restrictions with Communist China, and the American table tennis team received warm welcomes during a visit to the country.

Yuen, once a staff member at the University of Canton and now head of a federal self-help program for the elderly, was one of many residents in San Francisco's Chinatown who praised Nixon's announcement.

But some were skeptical of the move, calling it a "very small step" that won't lead to meaningful relations between the two powers unless the United States revises its policy toward Formosa and Southeast Asia.

Others saw the announcement as a major step toward peace. As Yuen put it, "There's more to the world than politics. I think the free flow of culture and friendship in both directions is very important in building a permanent peace on earth."

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here at a glance are highlights of President Nixon's responses to questions of a news panel at a meeting of the American Society of Newspaper Editors.

VIETNAM—American forces must remain in South Vietnam for as long as Americans are held prisoner by the North Vietnamese. The prospect of a residual ground and air force, and further bombing of the North would be an incentive to release the prisoners. Total withdrawal from South Vietnam is the goal, but first prisoners must be freed and the South Vietnamese must have the capacity to defend themselves.

CHINA—The next move in the U.S.-Red China detente is up to the Chinese. Each step, the President said, must be taken alone, but the United States is ready to move toward both increased trade and travel between the two nations. He refused to talk about the U.S. position on admitting Red China to the United Nations.

ECONOMY—Though the improvements have not been as great as the administration had hoped, the economy is up, and up sharply. With growing consumer confidence and encouraging signs such as high housing starts in March, this is not the time to change the basic economic game plan.

HOOVER—Criticism leveled at FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover have been unfair and malicious and any ideas that the United States is a police state are nonsense. Nixon refused to say anything about Hoover's term in office and whether he will allow Hoover to continue as FBI chief.

"Hawk" Dove himself,

Ron Moody, right, being prepared for filming during making of "Flight of the Doves."

The makeup man brings to life yet another "Hawk" Dove impersonation!

The faces are only the beginning . . . The variety of the other details—clothes, voice, bearing and behavior—of the disguises adopted by actor Ron Moody in the film, "Flight of the Doves," is equally astonishing and entertainingly mystifying! Moody plays "Hawk" Dove, a sinister uncle who chases two runaway children from England across Ireland, and who is a professional quick-change artist, a master of disguises, playing in sleazy shows in the English provinces.

So, his adoption of an eye-popping series of disguises during the chase is something he undertakes with very plausible relish and flair. But the one thing "Hawk" cannot disguise is a tender streak behind the villainous appearance—and after many a tense and thrilling episode the children's adventure has a happy ending and "Hawk" escapes to face another day . . .

The four disguises illustrated above are not all; there are still more to be spotted lurking through the movie. The glimpses of makeup procedures shown at the right and below give clues as to how the final effects were achieved.

STITCHIN' TIME

By JOANNE SCHREIBER

It's a sure sign of spring when teens turn out in tie-dyed tee shirts and jeans.

The art of tie-dye is one of the featured articles in the bigger-than-ever new issue of Basic Fashion, available exclusively to readers of this paper. For a tie-dyeing session, you will need rubber bands (wide for heavy stripes, narrow for fine cobwebby lines), 1/4-cup liquid or 1/2-package powder dye per quart of water, rubber gloves and a pot, big enough to hold the article you are coloring.

Band the article in one of the basic knots or folds as illustrated. Make your knots on wet fabric laid on a straight surface; band thin fabrics very tightly.

Solution should be kept at simmering temperature. Dip article in dye and allow 15 to 20 minutes for average fabrics; 20 to 30 minutes for heavy fabrics such as denim or fabrics with thick folds. When desired color is obtained (remember that wet fabrics look darker), squeeze out excess dye and rinse in cold running water. Unband knots, and rinse again till water runs clear. Iron while damp. Launder tie-dyed articles separately in cool water.

Q. I worked 10 days last year for a farmer and earned $135. Do I receive any social security credits for this?

A. No. You would earn credits only if the employer paid you $150 or more in cash during the year or if you would have worked on 20 or more days on a time basis for cash wages.

Q. I will retire next June when I attain age 65. My salary is $800 a month and my total earnings through June will be $4800. Will this prevent my receiving social security benefits until the following January?

A. No. Social security benefits are payable for any month you do not earn over $140. In your case, benefits would be payable effective with the month of July.

Q. My wife and I are separated but not divorced. Is she eligible for wife's benefits on my social security?

A. Yes. A legal wife is eligible for benefits and separation would not preclude payment of checks.

Having A Ball

In an oversized Mother Goose, a young patient at Fairland Clinic is laughing evidence that therapy can be fun. The toy, like many others at the Meadville, Pa., center for handicapped children, has built-in cyclo motors that massage as she rocks. Lower right, a circus clown looks down on two children exercising on a walking platform while a "pilot" runs through maneuvers in a plane, oblivious to his simultaneous massage. Left, ladder to exercise weak arms has a special attraction—a cat in the cutout tree visible only when a child reaches the top rung and presses a button to light up its eyes. The clinic, founded by the late industrialist Owen K. Murphy and pediatrician Dr. Ed. Connor 17 years ago, treats patients up to 13 free. It is supported by Niagara Therapy Corp., Adamsville, Pa.

"WHAT'S HAPPENING TO KIDS TODAY?" SHE SAYS

Dear Helen: Every Monday all the kids talk about in school is the wild times they had at Friday night's party, or how they got bombed or stoned or both during the few times, I finally started to look at myself and it made me sick.

Guys still call me up. They won't believe I've changed. When I tell them "No more of that stuff, a few stand by me, but it's awfully hard to tell which ones are just taking me out for what they can get. Which is nothing any more."

Just one more thing: There's an old saying, "It's easy going down the road, but it's very hard coming back."

I hope my letter will keep just one girl from starting on down. —BACK ON THE HIGH ROAD FOR GOOD

Dear Helen:

I was out of school a week because I had the flu and went to the doctor. A neighbor saw me, and started the rumor that I was pregnant and went for an abortion. Helen, why do some think that every girl is a two-bit you-know-what? This dame has the wildest parties on the block.—D. V.

Dear D.:

This dame probably judges everyone by her own actions. Rumors started by her type soon die.—H.

However, you didn't mention one encouraging point: A lot of pretty straight high school kids tell me they "tried all that stuff" when they were "too young to know better." Let's hope your friends will grow up too.—H.

P. S. Read on:

Dear Helen: I'm writing this so maybe other girls younger and older won't make the same mistakes. I'm 14, but look older. I've led a rough life for two years and it was no one's fault but my own. My folks are the greatest.

I have taken drugs, not just smoking weed, but pills, LSD, and even heroin. I'd do anything anyone asked me to do because I wanted to be a big shot. Oh, I was plenty popular, only sometimes I couldn't remember exactly why, being stoned out of my mind. I never cared that after a few dates, maybe even one, the guys dropped me.

North's double of three clubs was one of those nifty-fangled responsive doubles. In other words it was a second takeout double made in response to South's original takeout double and asked South to bid a major suit.

East kept the pressure on his vulnerable opponents by going to four clubs but South refused to be shut out and went to four spades.

East and West decided to let South play there. West had good defense. East had very little defense, but decided not to take a sure loss at five clubs.

East won the club lead with his queen and if East had been at all careless he would have attempted to cash a second club whereupon South would have made his contract.

East was not going to fall into that trap. He was sure that his partner held four clubs for the jump raise so that no second club trick was available. Then where could the defense find three more tricks?

One way would be if West held the ace of hearts. In that case the king of hearts lead would yield two hearts and a ruff.

Therefore, East plunked his king of hearts on the table. West didn't have the ace, but he did hold something that was just as good. South had to take his ace right away and lead a trump. West produced the ace and led queen and one heart to set poor South.

A—Bid six hearts. If partner holds four hearts to the ace-queen and the minor suit aces you prefer a heart to a spade grand slam.

TODAY'S QUESTION

Instead of bidding four hearts, your partner has bid four diamonds over your three spades. What do you do now?

DR. LAWRENCE E. LAMB

Back Pains Occur For Many Reasons

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb—I have previously had TB of the kidney. The doctors say it is cleared up. I still have pains in my back and kidney and wonder if this is normal. My urine has been checked and it shows nothing. Could there be anything else that causes this pain in the lower right side and back? I would also like to know why they just X ray the chest when they know I had TB elsewhere and why they don't check you where you have it.

Dear Reader—There are many things which can cause pain in the right side and back, including problems of the colon, particularly if someone is under emotional stress. Muscle pains and abnormality of the spine also cause difficulties in this area.

Regarding X rays, the chest is most often X rayed because one can easily see signs of tuberculosis in the lungs. This is not true of many other organs like the kidney since all the X ray often does is to outline a shadow of the shape of the organ itself. The difference is that the lungs are full of air and a kidney, for example, is not. This is why it is better to do examinations of the urine to tell how the kidneys are functioning than it is to use an X-ray examination when one is looking for tuberculosis.

There are some other examples where the X ray is useful in tuberculosis besides just the lungs. If tuberculous infection involves bone and causes enough erosion or damage to the bone, these changes can be seen.

Dear Dr. Lamb—Would you give a thought to an old lady of 78 with a health problem. I have pain in the lower jaw which comes on when I slide down in bed and have been asleep for some time. If I sit up for an hour the pain will go away. I have come to believe it has something to do with the blood. I have had all my teeth removed thinking it might end the trouble but it hasn't.

Dear Reader—Your theory about the pain in your jaw being related to circulation is not a bad one. It is true that heart trouble can cause pain in the jaw, rather than pain in the chest. It is also true that when the heart doesn't beat as strong as it used to, it can cause a small amount of fluid to accumulate in the lungs, particularly at night and can cause pain.

The fact that your pain occurs at night and is related to your sleeping position, and is relieved by sitting up, suggests that this could well be the case.

Why don't you go see your doctor for a heart checkup? He may be able to give you some medicine to get rid of any excess fluid you may have accumulated and give you some relief.

How Does an Actor Portray Christ?

By HANA UMLAUF

NEW YORK—(NEA)—"It is a staggering task for a mere human to play Jesus Christ—a superhuman task," confessed Helmut Fischer. And he should know.

Fischer, a practicing attorney in Oberammergau, Germany, portrayed Christ in 102 consecutive performances in that city's 16th annual passion play last summer.

That summer stand was the culmination of a life-long aspiration. "As Christ I could best communicate the spirit of inner peace and love which legitimizes the play," he explains. But when actually confronted with the depth of the role, he was suddenly overtaken by misgivings. How does a human presume to portray a God? How was he to prepare himself?

He overcame these initial doubts, he says, through a concentrated immersion in the role and the rapport which he felt with his fellow actors. Their approach isn't professional: they are lay actors who perform the play with devotion to and humbleness before the three-century-old tradition.

The play, which is performed once every decade in the Bavarian Alps, was originated in 1634 to fulfill a vow made by the people of Oberammergau. Terrified by the devastating Black Death, the villagers swore that if spared its ravages, they would perform a play of thanksgiving every 10 years. Not another villager died and the vow has been kept.

Fischer is strikingly suited to portray Christ.

"He's a real person—just being in his presence brings tears to my eyes and I'm not the crying sort," said Dr. Norman Vincent Peale when he met Fischer.

A quietly handsome man with a steady peaceful gaze,

HELMUT FISCHER, a German attorney, talks with two young fellow actors while dressed for his role as Christ in the traditional Oberammergau passion play.

Fischer says he has made it his life goal to seek peace and happiness on earth.

"The greatest impact of the 300-year-old Oberammergau tradition," he says, "is the spiritual effect it has on its spectators."

Recently the passion play has come under criticism. The current version, which some have decried as old-fashioned, naive and even bigoted, remains much as it was established 120 years ago. Because he believes the play transcends what we consider theater, Fischer defends it staunchly as it stands.

"I will fight to resist any change," he says. Fischer He does admit that the play is perhaps, too long and some outdated words and phrases should be edited, but that's all.

"The play is after all based on the Gospel," he argues, "and to modernize it would risk its becoming a fashion fad."

While everything around us is in a state of constant change, he explains, the constancy of the traditional form heightens the impact of the play.

"The immediate accord and touch I feel with spectators goes far beyond the language," he says. "This feeling was shared by the other actors as well." He seems to feel very strongly that the enduring attraction of the play has little to do with whether it is hip, as is its contemporary American counterpart, Jesus Christ Superstar.

Rather, in his mind the play has bridged the generation gap and its success is due to, and not despite, the fact that traditional form has been maintained.

Fischer also argues on a practical level: "Since most of the players are lay actors, it is easier for them to learn lines which they have been familiar with since childhood."

The most significant aspect of his portrayal for him, he says, was that he was deeply affected by his participation.

"Not only did I sense a spiritual rapport with the audience," he said, "but I also felt I transmitted the spirit of Christ's invocation to His disciples that they love each other as He loved them."

Now Dealing With Squares

LITCHFIELD, Conn. (AP) — Folk rock singer-composer Art Garfunkel is now dealing with squares. And Circles and triangles.

A spokesman for Litchfield Preparatory School said Garfunkel, half of the team of Simon and Garfunkel, began teaching geometry Tuesday and is expected to continue through the end of the semester.

Garfunkel has a summer home on nearby Bantam Lake.

Religion and Homosexual Discussed

By GEORGE W. CORNELL

AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — About 80 people filled the small conference room. Most were men, a half dozen women. Included were numerous seminarians and ministers, some in clerical collars. Many freely asserted their homosexuality.

"Homosexuality as a way of life is an idea whose time has come," said the Rev. Thomas Maurer of San Francisco, urging churches to recognize it as a moral alternative. "If something is sexually loving, it's good," he said.

The occasion was the first National Conference on Religion and the Homosexual, held here recently, and it offered a review of the rising demands by homosexuals for open acceptance by the churches.

It also sketched the rapid growth of a network of independent congregations especially for homosexuals.

There are now at least 10 of these "gay churches," started in the last two years in cities across the country, with others in the developing stages, conference leaders said.

"Our congregation has doubled to 600 in eight months and it will double again by September," said the Rev. Robert Clement, pastor of a Manhattan congregation for homosexuals, the Church of the Beloved Apostle.

"We've had a welling, outpouring of love like I've never seen before," he said. "People come, not because they're gay but because they're religious and they can worship without hiding their identities as homosexuals. The basic motivation is Christianity."

Marichal Is Robbed of No-hitter

By DICK COUCH

Associated Press Sports Writer
Juan Marichal was slinging merrily in the rain until he hung a ninth inning screwball out to dry.

Ken Rudolph, the Chicago Cubs' second-string catcher, dribbled the two-strike pitch into left field Friday night and a Marichal no-hitter evaporated in the San Francisco mist.

Marichal, the Giants' resurgent right-hander, held the Cubs hitless until Rudolph's leadoff single in the ninth, gave up another single by pinch hitter Jim Hickman and then wrapped up a 9-0 victory in a game delayed twice by rain in the early innings.

Chicago's first hit was the first for Rudolph in 18 trips to the plate this season.

In other National League games, St. Louis drubbed San Diego 7-1 behind Bob Gibson, the New York Mets nipped Pittsburgh 1-0 on Tom Seaver's three-hitter, Los Angeles edged Houston 6-5 in 10 innings and Atlanta held off Philadelphia 8-7. Cincinnati's scheduled game at Montreal was snowed out.

In the American League, Baltimore whipped the New York Yankees 6-1, Oakland took the Chicago White Sox 5-4 in 10 innings, California topped Minnesota 4-1 and Boston beat Detroit 5-3.

Marichal, bouncing back to his old form after a disappointing 12-10 windup last season, when he was plagued by injuries, issued a single walk in handcuffing the Cubs for eight innings.

After the hits by Rudolph and Hickman, a double play helped the 32-year-old Dominican ace seal his third 1971 victory without a loss.

The blank job was his second of the year and the 48th of his 11-year career—tops among active major league hurlers. Rain held up play for 32 minutes in the third inning and seven minutes in the fourth, with the Giants leading 5-0 and swinging freely between stoppages to get in the 4½ innings necessary to certify Marichal's no-hitter and their fifth straight victory.

Cub's Manager Leo Durocher, apparently disenchanted with the continuance of the game and the Giants' hurry-up tactics, lifted his first five hitters—Don Kessinger, Glenn Becker, Billy Williams, Ron Santo and Joe Pepitone—in the sixth.

Marichal mowed down their replacements until the ninth, when Rudolph spoiled his bid to duplicate a 1963 no-hitter he tossed against Houston.

Smith Likes the Tigers' Stadium

By KEN RAPPOPORT

Associated Press Sports Writer
A visit to Tiger Stadium really opens your eyes. Look what it's done for Reggie Smith.

"I see the ball well here," says the Boston Red Sox outfielder, "I just like hitting in this ballpark."

Boston's young man and the "see" had a look at the Detroit pitching again Friday, liked what he saw, and drove in two runs with a home run and sacrifice fly in the Red Sox' 5-3 triumph.

"Tiger Stadium has a good background," said Smith, "and I know there are certain pitches I can get in the air for a home run. Those kind of things psych me up. I guess."

The statistics back up Smith's tigerish penchant. Last year, he topped the Red Sox batters against Detroit with a .75 average, 24-for-64, with four home runs and 12 RBI.

California stopped Minnesota 4-1 for the Angels' fifth straight victory; Oakland also won its fifth in a row while handing Chicago its seventh straight 5-4 in 10 innings, and Baltimore whipped the New York Yankees 6-1 in the American League's other games.

The opening chapter of a Lurid novel? No, just the unusual livelihood of one of horse racing's noisiest characters.

Coleman tours race tracks in his native Kentucky and other states from February to December, checking the identifying tattoos all racing thoroughbreds carry inside their upper lip.

At Louisville's Churchill Downs, he checks entrants for each race, including the Kentucky Derby.

The indelible combination of numerals and letters tells Coleman if a horse is the one the groom, trainer or program say it is, and only eight horses out of the thousands he's checked have shown the wrong combination.

Four Quarter Milers on Olympic Team

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Only four quarter milers will earn berths on the U.S. Olympic team next year and three Los Angeles athletes figure they'll be three-fourths of that contingent.

"That leaves just one place on the team open to the rest of the country," said John Smith Monday. Smith, UCLA's defending AAU 440 titlist, said the team should consist of "me, Edese and Wayne."

Smith was referring to teammate Wayne Collett and Edesel Garrison of crosstown rival L.A., 3; Cardenal, St.L., 2;

Early Wynn Calls It 'Hall of Shame'

POMPANO BEACH, Fla. —(NEA)—Early Wynn has a suggestion for the Baseball Hall of Fame.

"If the Hall of Shame has one section for black players now, why don't they split up the owners and managers and executives that are in it, too?" he asked. "The next thing you know, they'll be putting a vendor who sold a helluva hot dog in next to Babe Ruth."

Wynn is bitter that he is not in next to Babe Ruth. Last year he came in second in the balloting to Yogi Berra. But neither received the minimum of 75 per cent of the votes cast. Wynn harbors a resentment toward the System—the System of Hall of Fame selection. And indirectly toward the writers who vote and, it seems, baseball in general.

Wynn, who won 300 games in a 23-year major league career, was disturbed when Satchel Paige was recently chosen to be the first black played on the same team together, had a beer together. And in his time he was probably a helluva pitcher. But he only won 20 games in the big leagues." (Paige in fact won 28.) "You can't put him in for what he might have done."

"The ones who are in were great people, no doubt about it," said Wynn. But he intimates they should not be taking up room in place of worthy players.

"Comiskey, Mr. Griffith, they should have a place of their own," he said.

The nonplayers are broken up into four categories (
